

Traits such as honesty, integrity, frugality and honor are musts in state government representation and leadership. Now contrast those desirable traits with the reality of our current elected officials and their failure as follows:

"Illinois has overtaken California as the worst credit risk among American states..."

Unlike California, Illinois cannot blame its budget woes on a particularly volatile revenue system or on outside exposure to the housing bubble. Illinois's crisis is unique in that it is purely a creature of mismanagement by elected officials."
